

Transition to Work - Service Delivery Plan

Community Engagement

YES -Youth Employment Services proudly delivers the Transition to Work (TtW) service in Outer Western Sydney to help young people not currently in education, with work readiness, education and training or recruitment to work, including apprenticeships and traineeships.

Working in partnership with the community is a strategic priority for YES Youth Employment Services.

Through our TtW service we will work with the local community by harnessing our collective efforts to move young people into work and fostering a sense of community ownership over the issue of local youth employment.

Partnerships with employers, business leaders, local government, education providers, service and sporting clubs and all types of community services, are critical in assisting young people to actively engage in employment and to build the connections and networks necessary to become active community members.

How to get involved

If you would like to volunteer or partner with us to support Transition to Work participants in your local community, we would love to hear from you.

For example, we may work together to help parents understand how education, training and employment has changed or we may work together to help our young people determine a career direction and gain employment.

Or you may have connections to young people seeking employment that we may also help support.

Opportunities are also available to:

- Mentor career aspirations and job seeking.
- Run related small group activities.
- Share specialist knowledge to gain a career start.
- Provide advice to ensure services are authentic and representing the needs of local employers.
- Support the training and gaining of experience necessary to be successful in the world of work.
- Join our Community Engagement Committee or help with a special project.
- Become part of our Inspiring the Future campaign.

Our vision: Every young person reaching their true potential

Our mission: To develop and implement innovative and high quality services, practices and policies to drive change that benefits all young Australians.

Together we can Inspire the Future of our community
